SPIRIT OF THE MORNING PRESS. The Intelligencer discusses the Clayton-Bulwer treaty to day through the pen of a correspondent, tersely, and with effect. The Union appounces that the Senate of Massachusetts have defeated the effort of the lower house of the Legislature of that State to increase the term of naturalization there to twenty-one years, and proposes to-morrow to review so much of the Pennsylvanian's recent ten column article on Mr. Buchanan as treats of that gentleman's position with reference to the slavery question. The Union commenting on the late admirable speech of Senator Douglas, takes occasion to say, with force indeed "There is one point in Judge Douglas's report which seems to us to make the demccratic position on the question of congressional restrictions upon territorial governments perfectly impregnable-we refer to the position that the power of Congress to give governments to the Territories of the United States is a necessary and proper incident to the express power to admit new States into the Union. Others have demonstrated the non-existence of this power in the clause for disposing of the territory and other property in which our opponents locate it, but, until Judge Douglas's report, we had not seen the question divested of all embarrassments by deducing the power as a necessary incident to that expressly given of admitting new States. As yet we have heard no effort to controvert the conclusiveness of this position. When it was announced in the Senate, upon the reading of the report, it struck us like one of those great truths which seem so simple and obvious when discussed that we are surprised they were not sooner brought to light, and which we hesitate to acknowledge because of their very simplicity and obviousness. For this reason, we have waited to hear what answer the intellectual champions of the opposition have to make to the position "

WASHINGTON NEWS AND GOSSII

The Mock Governor of Kansas .- We have at length obtained from California information bearing on the history of the career of Dr Chas. E. Robinson, who now sets up to be Governor of the State of Kansas, which we have for some time past been looking for. It shows conclusively that he is just the man for his present task of leading unthinking and excited persons to violate the laws and so to conduct themselves generally, as to run up an ount for which they will suffer in the end without stint. He is one of those discontented and unhappy spirits, satisfied only amid scenes of agitation and excitement. He reached California in '49, when there was ample material there for the gratification of his ruling passion. Sacramento, where he went to live. was located on lands belonging to Capt. Sutter, held through a valid Mexican grant to bim. It was in all respects correct, and all who desired lots in the city could purchase them at fair rates A class of persons, however, under the lead of Robinson, pretended to deny the validity of Sutter's title and proceeded to seize on the unoccupied lots; many of them selling them on speculation, as they could find dupes to purchase of them for any ready money they might obtain, and giving quit claim deeds. The dupes were of course thus left to contend before the courts with the real owners of the land, and were victimized to the whole amount of the purchase money paid. Thus many honest and confiding persons were swindled out of their every dollar. and their complaints to those who had de frauded them were met only with imprecations on the courts and the speculators. Their advice was, " Hold on to the land, fight for it, and in the end we will whip Sutter's gran tees and possess the best lots in the city our-laws. The miners were invited to leave their | mount and ride with him through a near path labors in the mountains and flock to the city to join Robinson and his band in "jumping" the lands of others, which had been honestly purchased and paid for. Hundreds not acquainted with this question of land title, led away by excitement and delusion, co operated with them. The result is, that after years of contest and excitement, and after spending | twice as high as usual, and setting old Toney in time and money enough to have purchased | himself into hysterics, as it were. "Why twice as much of the same lands as they attempted to acquire by force and violence, (the title, in the mean time, having been firmly and finally settled in favor of Sutter,) they found themselves the helpless victims of their unscrupulous leaders. Hundreds there are at this moment, whe, having spent the flower of their life (seven years) and their last dollar in this fruitless contest, are now without even hopes. They are really objects of commisseration with all familiar with the circumstances under which they were entrapped into the (to them fatal) dilemma by Robinson and his cooperators, whose sole purpose was to realize money by the excitement, in which he, especially, was successful; having long since left the country and his dupes, carrying with him his ill gotten gains.

A sight of the wreck he has made of his victims there would be sufficient to induce almost any other man to abandon his present somewhat similar wild career, in which he is inducing thousands to leave their homes and embark in a new and distant country, on a wild-goose chase of pretended opposition to slavery, to whom disappointment, mortification, and suffering will be their inevitable reward. But to return to Robinson in California. He counselled resistance to the law and the seizure of the lands of others on account of alleged invalidity of title. His advice was followed, and the business of the city was al most ruined by those lawless proceedings. Many of the intruders were removed from the lots by the ordinary legal proceedings, and while that was being done, Robinson and his party appeared in the streets, armed with rifles, headed by a mounted leader, avowing their determination to restore the lands by force to the parties ejected by order of the courts. It was apparent to the law-abiding portion of the community that if they should be permitted to accomplish their purpose, there must be an end to law, and propertyholders must abandon all hope of legal protection, and surrender their property to a band of men avowing themselves to be above and beyond the reach of all law.

This armed force, led on by unscrupulous leaders, paraded the streets defiant of the civil authorities. They were followed by thousands whom curiosity or interest prompted to witness so extraordinary a proceeding. Fear and hope alternated in the minds of the spectators as to the result. The suspense did not last long. In turning a corner, the crowd commenced, and a serious fight was the result, in which the mayor and sheriff, and several prominent citizens of Sacramento, lost their lives: several of Robinson's party were also killed, and he was conveyed to the prison brig dangerously wounded. Shortly afterwards an election of members to the Legislature took place, and owing to popular sympathy for him, arising cut of his confinement, he was returned as a member pledged to oppose all grants like that to Sutter, and their holders or assignees. The cry of the party electing him was-down with all such grants and their proprietors; which cry he had taught them.

Col. J. C. Fremont, the most obnoxious man in the State to Robinson's party, because the holder of the most important similar grant, was the candidate for the Senate of the United States of the party obeying the laws and sustaining the authority of the courts. Probably not a single man of all those voting for Robinson himself, would have voted for Fremont; party feeling upon the squatter question running so high at that time. To their utter astonishment he voted for Fremont for the U.S. Senate. Though the Legislature sat until the 31st of May, his name last appeared on the journals on the 27th of February The steamer left San Francisco on the 1st of March, and leaving San Jose on the morning of the 28th February, he reached the steamer, sixty mile distant, by a forced ride, in time to step8 aboard just as she was starting out to sea. Thus he abandoned his post and his constituents, having treacherously betrayed every interest he was elected to represent.

The indignation against him in Sacramento was so great on account of his course in the Senatorial election, and for his flagrant violation of every principle on which he was elected, upon the San Francisco water lots bills, and the question of the change of the seat of government, that his life would not have been safe from the vengeance of those who had voted for him, had he ventured to face them again; as he dared not do.

About the time of his surreptitious depar ture, resolutions providing for an investigation into charges affecting his character incidentally, were introduced, and it was supposed in Sacramento that he took that occasion to absquatulate. He next turned up in Kansas.

The Times Correspondent.-We owe an apology to the Star's readers for having permitted our temper, on Friday last, to get the better of our usual good-nature in the matter of the correspondent of the New York Times. We knew well that his imputation on us in connection with the Nicaragua embroglio was in fulfillment of his declared purpose of venting his personal hostility to us through the columns of papers for which he writes, and had noted so many proofs of that settled design as that, we confess it, we lost our patience; as one does at times with the persistent fly buzzing around one's nose. In yesterday's New York Times he again assails us in a manner evidently showing that our shot took effect. We have no reply to make to his allegations; none being necessary. He has evidently gone daft with rage, and we can only regret that there is nothing more of which he might accuse us by way of easing his perturbed spirit. For we usually so overflow with the milk of human kindness, as to be perfeetly willing to permit such persons to assail us to their heart's content, if in that way they can be relieved from the state of mind in which this individual evidently rests. Being both well known to public men in this community, no defense of ourself is necessary from anything he may write of us.

Some years ago a number of gentlemen in Fauquier county, Virginia, assembled for a deer-drive. A friend of ours-it was his first indulgence in the sport-was so astonished with the vim with which the young buck that had been started dashed up to and by him, that he failed to fire. He was instantly Thus were the people incited to resist the called by the gentlemen who led the hunt to to where an old negro, famous for never missing his game, was stationed-at the last "stand" on the "drive"—so as to make sure to have it brought down if the young fellows in the hunt failed to hit it. They reached old Toney just as the deer bounded by him, cutting up all sorts of astonishing rusties, leaping don't you kill that deer, you old rascal you?" exclaimed his master. "What's de use, massa, ob wasting powder and shot en dat ere fellow?" replied Toney. "Fore de Lord. massa, let him alone, and he jump so high he sure to break he own neck directly!"

In this case we have but to act on old Toney's injunction, as before, until he may again provoke us to take him in hand as on Friday
